

As a highly satisfied user of XM radio, I ask that MY rights to select the sources and channels of information and entertainment I receive not be unnecessarily restricted to meet the economic agenda of companies that seek to have an enforced monopoly. In the spirit of innovation, I would ask that satellite radio, as a new service delivery model, be allowed to experiment with delivery models that can improve the services we receive. Anything less would contradict the public service role underlying the whole raison d'ete for the FCC and public oversight of the broadcasting function. Although they seem to forget it from time-to-time, the broadcasters are there to support us the public, not the reverse! And the role of the FCC is to enforce that proposition.
